INTRODUCTION

Azad Foundation's Year Book is both a record and an exploration of the journey of trainees with the Women on Wheels (WoW) Programme.

WoW is the flagship programme of Azad where women from resource poor backgrounds (economically and socially deprived) are trained to become professional chauffeurs through a 6-8 month long training.

Azad's focus is to create livelihoods with dignity for women who have been living on the margins of society. This requires not only access to skills and know how (of driving) but also the confidence to claim the public space, the ability to negotiate a 'masculine' domain of work and surmount the challenges this throws up. Women from across class, caste and community also experience tremendous reproductive responsibilities at home limiting their time and ability for paid work. Violence, discrimination and sexual harassment are also rampant at home, on roads and at the workplace. A training programme geared to create sustainable livelihoods in the non traditional sector (which has traditionally been men's domain) for women has to create capabilities of negotiating or redistributing unpaid reproductive responsibilities as well as resisting violence and harassment. It is with this in mind that Azad's training curriculum spans three kinds of modules: technical skill based modules leading to acquisition of Permanent License and clearance of the Sakha test after which the trainee is declared employable; self development modules such as Communications, English Speaking, Work Readiness and First Aid aimed at developing women's identity as confident professionals; and empowerment modules such as Self-Defense, Gender Rights, Legal Rights, Sexuality and Health which are aimed at enabling the trainee to understand her social location and the structure of patriarchy leading to the building of courage and strategies to counter and resist multiple oppressions.

The Year Book documents stories of trainees who have acquired the Permanent License, across Delhi (South, East and North), Jaipur and Kolkata centres of Azad, in the period April 2015-March 2016. Given the socio economic background of trainees and the multiple ways in which they engage with the curriculum, the Year Book cannot be a compilation of dates and achievements. Each trainee comes in with her unique story, unique experience and unique struggle. For Azad-a trainee is not a number. She is a precious individual who makes Azad an opportunity to assume control over her life and livelihood. The Yearbook offers a glimpse into each of these women's story of struggle and change.

But, her family, on knowing of her relationship with a boy, did not let her take admission and grounded her within the four walls of the house. She thought that if this were what it would take for them to let her continue, she would do it.

She feels more confident now and is able to voice her opinion at home. She says, "Since I have started speaking up for my rights, my parents have lessened the restrictions on me, but a lot remains to be changed still." She wants to become something in life and is therefore determined to continue her training.

Rukhsaar has two daughters and one son. Her in-laws do not approve of the girls' education, but Rukhsaar has stood firm on the ground that they will study further. Her in laws want her daughter to get married but she does not give in.

It is with such determination that Rukhsaar came into Azad to do her training to become a professional chauffeur. She says, "I know about the incidents which happen in cabs, with women and children, so I think if there is a lady driver, the women and children will be able to travel safely." She heard about Azad through a partner organization, Jagori. It was a year before she actually joined that she had called Azad to inquire. Her in-laws did not approve of this and she lost a year fighting with them. Finally she said, "I have to do this, whether you like it or not." It is then that she came to join Azad.

She initially had problems in admission, as she had had an inter-caste marriage and her name on the marriage certificate had been changed. So she had to go through the entire process of getting her new name in the papers and finally getting the verification done. After this she took training and applied for her learner's license.

She comes to training regularly and has to earn her own conveyance money as the husband does not have enough to give her. It is for this that she does stitching at night so that she can earn and come to Azad.

She says, "When I came, I felt different because I had not been associated with any organization which taught anything similar. We were treated well and given a lot of information. When we went for our learner's license, we knew everything and were confident. Our trainers are also very supportive. They teach us with a lot of patience. When I used to sit in the car earlier, I would feel like closing my eyes if a truck came by, so they had to work extra hard with me."

"All our other trainings are also very good and I feel they are not done just with the intention of finishing them, but take into account how we learn and feel about it." She recently had a case in her house for which they had to go to the police to file an FIR. No one would go and they also told Rukhsaar not to. But she had knowledge about women's rights and the laws relating to counseling and reporting, as she had taken the gender and legal rights class. So, she went herself and as a result, the police had to file an FIR. She is now following up the case and everyone in her house is listening to her, though they do not approve of it. .

She has had to face various types of rebukes in her house to come this far. She was also told that since her age is above 35, it is not the age to move forward, but the age to take 2 steps back and think about your children. She says, "Age is not a barrier for me. I want to be a driver and I know it is not late for me to do so. If I get the opportunity, I can really go forward and do something."

She says that earlier she used to get out of the house, but it was limited. She did not know any routes and would wonder how to get anywhere in the city. Her lack of knowledge of places also brought about mistrust in her of people on the road. Now she says that she has no inhibitions, she knows the routes and knows where to get her work done. She goes to different places for her training and has even started using the metro after much struggle. She will start her self-drive module in about 15 day and will be ready to go for her job in two months.

She says, "I want to reach to a certain place in driving, where I can change people's perceptions about the profession and women's place in it. From now on, I just want to fly!"

Date of Joining	3/2/2015
Date of Permanent License	10/7/2015
Current Status	IN JOB

Seema, age 25 years, joined the Azad Foundation training in February, 2015 and completed training in October 2015. She has passed 12th standard in school. She worked for a brief while as placement driver through Sakha and will be joining as a driver in the DCW initiative. Seema came to Azad Foundation first with the idea of doing some odd jobs at the office. There, the staff and other trainees inspired her to join the training and become a driver. Seema realized that this could be her path to a better life, an independent life. Her parents did not like the idea of her becoming a driver, but she was determined. Her training course included driving training and several modules on self- defense, first aid, gender and legal rights, sexual and reproductive health and communications.

Seema is now well on the path to realizing her dreams. Being a survivor of violence and a single mother of a child of 4 years, challenges abound. It is not like she does not feel scared at moments to rebel but she has seen now that that if she does, misbehaviour does stop. She realizes now that if she does not think of herself as weak, she can lead a better life. She dreams of giving a life different from her own to her child. She wants her child to grow up with confidence and Azadi! She also wants to show the world that it is possible to live a life of dignity and happiness despite being a single mother. Even while driving on the road, there are challenges such as people staring at her just because she is a woman driver. But this does not discourage her. Rather, this strengthens her determination and she encourages others to join driving. Only when there are many drivers on the road, can there be a change of attitude.

Brief Background of Seema

Seema is a survivor of violence. She faced repeated sexual abuse from the age of 8 years. She was also subjected to a brutal rape at the age of 14 and had to be hospitalized for some time. Although she wanted to study further, her family was not supportive and forced her into marriage with a drug addict, apprehensive that no one else would want to marry a raped girl. Seema faced continuous domestic violence at her in-law's place to the point of being nearly murdered. Her parental family did not support her or want to take her in. In the face of life threat and having the responsibility of a small child, Seema took some very courageous steps:

She left her in-law's place and stayed with her 9 month old child in the Mahila Dakshita Samiti for 3-4 months.

When her mother fell ill, she shifted to her parent's house and supported her mother and child by teaching in a private school and by stitching for a living.

She lodged a case of domestic violence at the court and in 2014, the court gave her permission to stay in her in-laws' house and also ordered her husband to pay her Rs. 3500 per month. When she returned, her husband again tried to kill her. She had already anticipated that such an event might happen and had alerted the police. During the violence, she was able to contact the police and with their help lodged a complaint and had her husband jailed for 10 days.

Despite the fact that she had no knowledge of legal systems, she visits the court regularly and has become confident to fight the case for justice and for the future security of her child.

She is a single mother now, working towards giving her child a new future. Although her husband, begs her to return, she knows this is only to avoid police and court cases, and has decided to live alone and bring up her child on her own.

She joined Azad Foundation and is now part of a non- traditional livelihood. When people pass comments about lady drivers, her determination only grows stronger. She wants to encourage more women to join driving, protest against violence and lead a life of dignity.

Pinky was in an abusive marriage with an alcoholic husband who never took care of the family and squandered all that he earned on gambling and alcohol. Pinky recalls that even during her childbirth she received neither monetary nor emotional support from her husband. Exasperated with the domestic violence and lack of support, Pinky separated from her husband. Unfortunately she was unable to bring her son with her and this is a constant source of worry for her. She has tried to get her son back multiple times but to no avail. Her parents too did not support her decision thereby rendering her completely vulnerable, economically and socially.

It is at this time that Pinky found out about Azad Foundation through a friend whose sister works as a chauffeur. Desperate for a strategy for survival, Pinky joined Azad Foundation. After joining she realized that Azad gives and promises much more than survival. Pinky says that even in these desperate times, Azad has given her hope and confidence. Pinky says, "I have lost my fear of talking to people. I can talk in front of anyone now and I am not afraid to speak my mind". Pinky loves driving and is amazed at her own ability. "After sitting behind the steering wheel I feel I can do something and take control", Pinky observes. She has also learnt how to drive the motorcycle. Pinky enjoyed the self defense and the First Aid modules. While the former gave her confidence to protect herself in tough situations, the latter enabled her to help some people who got physically hurt or ill.

The most important change she feels is in her attitude. Earlier she was like any other woman, wearing saree and bangles, fearful of what others might say and striving to keep up to the image of a 'proper' (read good) woman. She asserts: "Now I don't do anything like that. Many people comment on this change in me and my attire, but it does not worry me at all. It's my personal choice!" Her mother and sister have started talking to her now after a long time, despite the fact that her father has forbidden them to maintain any relation with her. Pinky says that the difference in her situation from the past to the present is that she feels much more confident that she will be able to stand up on her own, whether or not she gets any support. She wants a divorce from her husband and gain custody of her son. Her optimism touches hearts when she says, "My life is much larger, this problem, this pain is a very small part of it."

Name	ARCHANA MUNDA
Date of Birth	2/2/79
Education	8TH PASS
Locality	NARENDRAPUR
Marital Status	MARRIED
Number of Children	2
Date of Joining	22/7/2015
Date of Permanent License	23/11/2015
Current Status	WAITING FOR JOB

"It feels like that we are flying high with our wings wide open" Archana Munda, the mother of two, decided to come and join Azad Foundation with the dream of living a life with dignity and self respect. Archana remembers her childhood with pain; she used to attend the local primary school, but due to abject poverty she had to help her mother in agricultural work and so she was irregular in school. The arrangement was that she would go to school for one month, and the next month she would assist her mother in the field. Archana also started working as a domestic worker for supporting the family, and was forced to drop out of school. Archana said, "I got readmission in class five, with my own savings, but could not continue, as I was married off."

Life after marriage has been quite a challenge for Archana. Her husband is a habitual drinker, and abuses her under the influence of alcohol. Owing to the fact that her husband hardly contributes anything for the family, Archana started working as a construction worker. Archana said that unlike most men who only work outside and do not take care of the household and the children, the woman has to be a multi-tasker capable of running the house as well as work outside. Previously Archana's mother-in-law did not cooperate with her, but her honest effort at keeping the household running has finally won her mother-in-law's support and trust.

After joining Azad foundation, Archana feels confident and emancipated. This is like a dream come true for her. She has always been inspired watching women driving cars. She remembered when she was a young girl, she saw an interview of a woman driver on TV, and from then on she had wanted to drive. Thoughtshop Foundation, introduced her to Azad foundation and from then on Archana never looked back.

Her husband had discouraged her by saying that it is a man's work, and a strenuous job. "I carry cement bags in construction sites up two or three storeys and so I am well aware of what a strenuous job entails”, was Archana’s response. Archana says, “Women can do everything. Men, in order to hide their inability and inefficiency try to control women and force them to remain in the private sphere, saying that they are no good in the public arena”. Archana wants to prove that women are efficient both inside the household and outside it. For her, learning to drive and becoming a driver is like reclaiming her space as half of the universe. Archana describes an incident where she was driving carefully as an elderly couple was crossing the road in front of her. An auto was continuously honking behind her and finally the arrogant auto driver overtook her from the left (the wrong side) and remarked “Go, cook at home.” Archana says, “I wanted to answer back, I have already done that and have come to work. Can you do the same?”

Archana shared that she has introduced her mother-in-law with all the staff members of Azad Foundation. Her mother-in-law feels proud to see her daughter-in-law’s photograph and interview in the newspapers. Previously her mother-in-law used to burden her with all the household responsibilities, but now after knowing about her training and work, she has started helping her in household chores. She has even started serving food for her before she leaves for office. Archana feels amazed by this change. Her husband still tries to abuse her. Incidents of abuse and scuffle persist, but her conviction and confidence has given her a new lease of life, a life progressing from strength to strength, a life dreaming of a better tomorrow. Archana is presently working as a Valet at Medica Superspecialty Hospital, Kolkata.
